CHICKENS COMING HOME.

It is a well known fact that Adams always won politically by the trading off of other men on the ticket. The Occasional, a Democratic paper in Virginia City, gives a thorough exposure of this old chestnut trick of Adams as follows:

"We know that, when in office, Governor Bradley had reason to heartily dislike Lieutenant Governor Adams, and that he believed Adams guilty of treachery in political matters. Governor Bradley and many of his friends, also believed that in the political campaign of 1878 Mr. Adams joined hands with the enemies of the former, and by that means and by vote trading secured his own election at the expense of other Democrats on the State ticket. Governor Bradley was one of the most honest men that God ever made, and his judgment of men was accurate and sound. If, then, he believed Mr. Adams an unfit man for official position, shall his friends be found supporting Adams for re-nomination? We hope not. Let them rather by their votes at the primaries relegate Governor Adams to political oblivion."

"We have from good authority the statement that when Governor Adams appointed a gentleman of this city to the office of Commissioner of Storey county he requested the appointee not to give positions to the friends of Mr. Canavan, and also requested him not to retain any friends of Mr. Canavan in office. What say the friends of Mr. Canavan to this? Will they overlook these things and vote at the coming primaries for Adams delegates to the Elko Convention? Can they doubt how Mr. Canavan would vote if alive?"

"It has been charged that hundreds of Democratic votes, which at the State election four years ago should have been given to Mr. Burke, for Lieutenant Governor, were traded off by friends of Governor Adams for the benefit of the latter. Will the friends of Mr. Burke submit in silence to this act of treachery now that an opportunity is offered to 'settle old scores,' or will they show their detestation of it by 'lining' the Adams delegates at the coming primaries?"

"There are, then, it appears, three elements in the Democratic party that ought unanimously to oppose the re-nomination of Governor Adams—the friends of Governor Bradley, the friends of Mr. Canavan, and the friends of Mr. Burke. In addition to these elements there are the temperance people and the saloon and liquor-dealing interests of the State. Governor Adams, by non-action upon the anti-Treating law of 1885, tried to carry water on both shoulders. He did not dare to offend the liquor interests by approval of the bill; he feared that he would offend the temperance people by a veto. He therefore left the State to evade a responsibility which devolved upon him by virtue of the State Constitution and his oath of office. He fell between the two interests and received the contempt of both. We have reason to believe that both will do their utmost to defeat the Governor for re-nomination."

WHY THEY WON.

The striking car men of San Francisco have won their fight because they had a good grievance and the public was an ally and sympathizer. Union men were discharged from the company's employ because they were Knights of Labor. The car men all quit work and declined to return until these men were reinstated. The company decided to meet these men and talk matters over like sensible people do in business matters.

The men showed their side of the case and the Directors were convinced that the men had properly conducted themselves. They said they would reinstate eight men but not the ninth because he was a drunkard. The car men asked for evidence on that point, and it was furnished. They admitted that the charge was true and did not ask his retention. The eight discharged men were reinstated and the Federated Trades won the fight. It was short and sharp, and now that it is over there is a better understanding on both sides.

This powder never varies. A marvel of purity, strength and wholesomeness. More economical than the ordinary kinds, and cannot be sold in competition with the multitude of low test, short weight, alum or phosphate powders. Sold only in cans. Royal Baking Powder Co., 105 Wall St., N. Y.
